Dear Professor Kaminski,

This letter is to thank you and your team for a fabulous experience in Poland last June. The 12th conference of 'Recovering Forgotten History' provided a unprecedented opportunity to receive feedback on all aspects of the fifth edition of Europe Today. I was particularly grateful for the detailed comments that were given on the chapters about Poland and Russia. The wider discussion of European security, economics, and politics played an important role as well.

As we plan the revisions for the sixth edition of our textbook, we will certainly take the opportunity to reflect on the many points that were made – both large and small. I am confident that a much stronger volume will be the result, with more effective coverage of Central and Eastern Europe, a different array of chapters for student use, and a more balanced presentation of what 'Europe' is all about.

Few academic conferences manage to pack so much useful discussion in so little time. Thank you once again for providing me with this opportunity. It was a great experience both for me and for my colleagues. I hope you will keep us in mind for future events.

Sincerely,

Erik Jones
